

The Glasgow City Council (Barras (North)) (Traffic Management) Order 2014 (Variation No.2 - Carbon based permit charges and additional permit charges) Order 202_

Glasgow City Council proposes to consider the introduction of the above named Traffic Regulation Order in terms of the Road Traffic Regulation Act 1984, as amended.

Background to the proposed Order:

The Glasgow Transport Strategy is Glasgow's updated local transport strategy which will help guide decision-making on transport up to 2030. One of its four overarching outcomes is: Transport contributes to a successful and just transition to a net-zero carbon, clean and sustainable city.

This TRO is being promoted in line with the following policy:

Policy 93: Explore emission-based resident parking charges as a policy intervention to influence the transition to cleaner and low emission vehicles in private ownership (particularly cars and vans)

Action 93. A: Undertake a scoping exercise on this by the end of 2023 and include in the strategic plan for parking if appropriate.

Glasgow City Council are proposing to alter the pricing structure for residents parking permits throughout the city. The pricing strategy has been taken in line with the current vehicle tax rates stated by DVLA which can be found at: www.gov.uk/vehicle-tax-rate-tables.

A new carbon-based, and additional permit pricing strategy has been identified for all existing Restricted Parking Zones (RPZ) and Controlled Parking Zones (CPZ). This new strategy would see permit pricing based upon a vehicle's level of carbon dioxide (CO2) emissions. An additional charge will be levied for those households/properties who purchase multiple permits.

The roads affected by these proposals are bounded by:

Duke Street to the north; Bellgrove Street to the east; Gallowgate to the south and Great Dovehill to the west.

The list of roads affected by these proposals are:

Armour Street, Barrack Street, Bell Street (between Great Dovehill and Hunter Street), East Campbell Street, Hunter Street, McFarlane Street, Melbourne Street, Sydney Street, Wellpark Street.

Details of the proposals are as follows: The proposal is to alter resident parking permits charges in line with a new carbon-based structure and introduce an additional charge for multiple permits.

There are quarterly permits available that make the permit charges more affordable throughout the year. Details of the new pricing structure can be found below:
